It consists of fifty letters from older hound Sherlock with a kaleidoscope of scenarios. They're written in southern dialect and, when you first look at the page, it seems formidable to decypher - but read the letters quickly and, lo! the mists introduced by the dialect waft away! The biggest achievement to me is the personality of the author (well, author's owner) - the letters are all hang together so you see a real mind behind them! He was fourteen at the time and Sherlock must by now have gone to his reward, but this is his legacy. An example - in one letter he wonders why college sports teams are always named after useless animals, such as tigers. Why not a team named for Basset hounds? He then suggests several cheers, one of which might be: "rah rah ree, bite 'em on the knee! Rah rah rut, bite 'em on the other knee!"4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Funny stuffBy SazabiBrilliantly written. Sherlock sounds like he would have been a real character. Bassets are the ultimate breed for affection and nature, and lets be honest, they are impossibly adorable. Thanks to the author for sharing these letters. The fact of the matter is they make sense. Sherlock simply tells it like it is.3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Simply delightful!By Cheryl 1958Oh Sherlock... the places you've been and the things you've seen, excuse me, thangs you sean. I had tears rolling down my chubby cheeks from laughter. You need write a book on your adventures, maybe one on your observations of hoomankind. Get to klackin on that there PC, you funny little dawg!"Deer Aint Peggy," written from a dogs eye view makes the reader wonder "just how does my dog see me?" Sherlock takes a laid back look at the world and helps us to see that there can be fun at every turn and everyday is an adventure. This is a repeat read for sure!

This book contains a collection of 50 letters written by a Basset Hound to his human relatives and friends. Sherlock's letters appeal to adults -- young and old -- and to teenagers. From his perspective, everything makes perfect sense. From a human reader's perspective, the letters are hilarious and endearing. Sherlock suggests innovative solutions to humankind's perplexities. He provides unusual observations of human and pet behavior. Sherlock reports on his misadventures around the house, in the neighborhood, on outings and trips, and at the veterinarian's. Welcome to the world of Sherlock P. Blanchard, Basset Hound.

About the AuthorSherlock Perry Blanchard is a fourteen-year-old Basset Hound. He has lived in Florida, Georgia, Texas and North Carolina, and has traveled extensively in most of the Southern states. Sherlock's original dream was to become a TV repairman. He signed up for a TV repair correspondence course. In the first workbook exercise, the instructions were to "grasp the reiterater between your thumb and forefinger and gently pull over and out." Lacking an opposable thumb, he grabbed the reiterater with his teeth, and it shocked the zippy-tee-doo-dah out of him. He gave up TV repair on the spot (no pun intended) and made the fateful decision to become a writer and philosopher. His writings have concentrated on solving humankind's irritating problems; recording unusual observations of human and pet behavior; and journaling his many misadventures. OTHER LITERARY WORKS: Sherlock has a large collection of letters he has written to friends and relatives. This is his first published compilation.
